CINCINNATI, July 29. - The mystery funeral on forsday surrounding the disappearance of Col. A. E. Jones, surgeon general of Ohio on Governor Foraker's staff, from his home on Walnut Hills, last Thursday, was sorved Saturday morning by the fluding of his body in a man hole of the sewer at the corner of Park avenue and Cyprus street. The man lad been brutally murdered, his bedy tied up in a sack and thrown into the sewer.

Within twelve hours after the discovery of the body of the aged physician the nurderer was captured by police headquarter detectives, locked up in a cell, and a full confession obtained of him. The murderer was Charles Blytle: He is 29 years old. Blythe had been employed by Col. Jones three months ago as a coachinen, gardener and man-of-all-work. Blythe murdered Col. Jones Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the colonel's stable. Blythe had been ordered to weed the garden. He did not do the work as promptly as Col. Jones desired. Col. Jones went to the stable Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock to admonish him.

Blythe says Col. Jones struck him with a light oaken staff. He admits the blow was a light one, and did not lant him at all. He confessed that after Col. Jones struck him he went to the rear of the stable, picked up a heavy oaken stick, "about de size of my wrist;" he described it, "an' struck the colonel on the head while his back was towards me." The unirderer, as he confessed, then procured a sack, which was hanging on a tree near by, pulled the month of the sack over the head of the nurdered man, and then "de colonel drew up his legs into the sack, and I didn't He Expresses Himself Well Pleased With up his legs into the sack, and I didn t have to erowd dem in. After the body was placed in the sack Blythe hid it until dark. Then he bound about the sack, with its bleeding corpse, leathern with the meetings he addressed, and great the back when a policy of the corps and corps and corps and corps are the corps and corps and corps are the corps and corps are the corps are the corps are the corps are the corps and corps are the corps are thongs that he found in the stable, interest seemed to be taken among all When night had fallen and the hall classes in the single tax question. were deserted and silent, the nurderer picked up his burden, lifted it to his Cambridge, had come out in favor of the shoulder, sneaked out the side street! into the dark, and all unobserved reached the sewer, the cover of which he lifted, and then dropped the sack into the dark hole, at the bottom of which he says he could hear the waters

Then the murderer reulized that murders may be committed, but they cannot be concealed. After the sack had been dropped into the sewer Blythe returned to Col. Jones' house. Then he went home. "I went to bed," he said, "but I couldn't sleop at all, and I got up before the sun was up. I couldn't sleep because I couldn't forget what I'd gone and done." The next morning the murderer went to the home of Col. Jones. Col. Jones' family had not yet realized that the father had been murdered. All that day, while the body of the old man was lying in the sewer, they searched for him.

Jones' whereabouts. Knowing that the old man would never again come back to the house the murderer lied coolly and persistently. "I haven't seen de colo-nel," he said. "I haven't heard anything about him," he answered. That night, Friday, he went home late, and went to bed. "I couldn't sleep," he said, "and Sat rday mornin" I got up early, and went down to Col. Jones' house. I packed up my things. Mrs. Jones and Miss Jones asked me if I'd heard anything. I told 'em I hadn't. Then I went away."

Then I went away."
This, in brief, was the murderer's story. Blythe, with his value in hand, went to the Columbia station of the narrow gange railway, purchased a ticket to Madisonville, got on the train, was frightened, got off the train, walked around the station, and when he came back the train was gone, The murderer then walked to Madisonville. The operator at Colmubia had read a description strange actions of Blythe ho telegraphed Madisenville to look out for him, and then telegraphed Col. Deitsch. Col. Klein, who were informed of the manderer's location, surrounded the house. The detectives entered and cap-tured the naurdorer, and he was brought back to the city. After he had been examined by Col. Deitsch und a full confession of the crime had been obtained from him, he was looked up in a cell at police hendquarters.

Blythe is a sullea-looking negro. He has big eyes and is very nearly black. He has thick lips, with a slanting fore-head, and has the general appearance of a bad man.
The deceased having ranked as n

Eight Lives Lost.

During the storm an unoccupied three story brick building, at the corner of Oakley avenue and Twenty-first street, was blown over on an adjoining cottage, completely crushing the latter, instantly killing eight and seriously injuring three of its occupants. Two families lived in the cottage, the front part being occupied by Cornelius Ferdinands, a blacksmith, with his wife and four children, and the rear by Charles Buck, a laborer, his wife and three children. The wreeked cottage caught fire from the overturned stoves in it, but tho flames were soon extinguished and the work of rescue begun.

Charles Buck, who lived in the rear, was found punned down by heavy timbers. He was terribly injured about the head, face and chest, but may recover. His wife was found dead, crushed beyond all recognition. Gustaf, his oldest son, aged 13, was fastened under a heavy beam. His right leg was broken and his skull fractured. He was taken to the hospital, and cannot survive his injuries. Anna Buck, aged 8, and Albert accord to ware articled to death bert, nged 6. were orushed to death.

C. Ferdinand was found erushed to death in his doorway. His wife was lying near him with their 2-year-old babe, Cora, clasped in her arms. The mother C. The Colsons' Record.

It is an old saying that a fellow must not run for office if he doesn't want his own record and that of his family shown

When Mr. David G. Colson was nominated for State Treasurer a few weeks ago by the Kentucky Republicans their party papers were filled with glowing editorials, telling what a nice young man he is. These Republican editors may have been honest-hearted in what they said, and may have believed all they wrote to be the truth and all that, but in the light of later developments it seems they are all badly mistaken in their man. Their nominee, Mr. David G. Colson, belongs to a family that has done much to bring disgrace and odinm upon the State by reason of the feuds, brawls and kl lings in which several of the sons have figured as prominent actors. At least that is the case, if the story told by a Pineville correspondent of the Courier-Journal is true. Inasmuch as Mr. Colson is a candidate for State Treasurer, it is well for the people to know something about him. We copy from the Covington Commonwealth. It says: "A Pineville correspondent of the Courier-Journal throws some light on the Colson family, who reside at Middlesboro, twelve miles from that place. It is mighty interesting reading for the party high moral ideas and law and order sen- "by which," says the Press, "they will m., until August 1st. timent of the State. It seems that they (the Colsons) have all been more or less fellows who are getting "practically the implicated in the lawlessness and mur- sole benefit of the tariff laws," are very der that has prevailed in that aection, and most of them have killed their man, campaign contributions. going in pairs to attack him, two to one.

"Speaking of the arrest of Gen.' Sowthat section, the correspondent says:

not want to wait for the law, but was bent upon releasing him, and for some time it was thoughi that Coison had organized a rescuing party, and was only waiting for a favorable time to attack Sowders' prison and give his Dave Colson was most bitterly a partisan of Sowders, and when the leader was arrested by Aivis furner and some of his people, Coison declared himself in readiness to join a crowd

"We make some further extracts from this historical sketch:

The Colson family has always lived in Beli County, and no other set of men has done more or alded more ln making Bell County a blot and a disgrace to the fair name of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. or reingees, the Colsous have done their part well, and to them, as much as to the Sowders, the Inrners and the ileudricksous, does the credit for the binwling, outlawry and bloody murdering reputation of Beli County belongs.

The older Colson was a man of some basiness ability, who was no better uor no worse than his neighbors. Until he reared a set of boys, life family uame had not become prominent in that secilon. Murders and fends and killings gave the Coisons notorlety, and now part of members of Congress to give everybody in that section is afraid to speak, even in whisper of the deeds of the Coisons. Of the brothers, six are old enough to have become implicated in the brois and the-e six are James Colson, 'Red' Coison, | John Colson, Gll Colsou, David G. Colson and George Colsou.

"'Red' and James Colson killed a crippled Confederate soldier at Cumberland ner, Alf McAtee, assassinated Joseph aud widows and houses full of children. Savs the correspondent:

Even for Beil County this crime was regarded as assassination, and things were made so warm for the murderers that they were dicted. Both men went to Texas, and there Colson is now living away from his grown-up family, and with never an effort made to relnrn.

Another hrother, George Colson, followed 'Red's 'example, mnrdered his man (a Constable) and fled to Texas, where he died recently away from home and friends.

"The correspondent further states that Gil Colson as County School Superintendent has been 'indicted for wrongfully obtaining the funds of the schools,' and that:

He has been frequently sued; by the illy-paid and hard-working teachers for withholding their salaries and putting the money to his own uses, and there are any number of unsatisfied judgments against him brought by

And the Republicans ask the people of Kentucky to honor this family by electing one of the sons State Treasurer.

Ir Kentucky Republicans can't find any better family than the Colsons to honor with the offices, they should quit busines.

THE regular August election will take place a week from to-day. Frazee, Poyntz, Sharp and the constitutional convention should receive a blg majority in Mason. Every Democratic vote should be polled.

KENTUCKY Republicans had a good claim the fact. deal of trouble to find some one to run for State Treasurer, and in the light of recent developments it would have been much better for them to have made no nomination at all.

Marshal King then started to arrest Sutton. The officer was accompanied by Bayless Farley as Deputy. Each with paralysis Saturday, but is resting had armed himself, the Marshal he had borrowed from "Buckskin finely. The indications are that the corn Jim," while Deputy Farley had a pistol. The gun was loaded with hird-shot. Sutton was found on the porch at his home. The officers called to him to surrender, but instead of doing so he drew his pistol, and the weapons of all three cracked about the same instant. Sutton fell and it was thought for a few minutes that he had received a fatal wound. One charge of the bird-shot had struck him on the forehead, and had almost torn off his scalp. Investigation afterwards showed that the shot was a glancing one, and it is thought that no vital part was penetrated. A few scattering shot had struck him about the face. The shooting was done at close range and his escape from instant death was a narrow one. He recovered consciousness shortly afterwards and although he had bled profusely it required three or four men to overpower wounds were dressed by Dr. Heaton. This morning he was doing as well as could be expected.

The Fuel of the Day

An Interesting Interview on the Subject.

COAL, COAL OIL, NATURAL GAS.

Professor W. J. McGee, of the United States Survey, Has Something to Say on the Known Deposits of the Earth-Other Dispatches as Telegraphed From the National Capital.

Washington, July 29. - The reported discovery of rich coal deposits in the Rocky mountains, near the northern border of the United States has revived the interesting question of the probable quantity of fuel deposits in this country. The Post publishes an interview with Professor W. J. McGee, of the United States survey on this subject, in which he says: The known deposits of coal, coal oil, and natural gas, the fuel of the day are not so great as many people suppose. There are many localities of the United States which are strange to the geological survey. What wealth may be developed in them is very largely un-known, but a calculation of the amount of anthracite coal of the country, and the probable cousumption, results in a very well demonstrated conclusion that such deposite will be exhausted within a century, while bituminous coal will not last longer than three or four ceuturies if there is no more new finds."

"When will the coal oil and natu:...

"When will the coal oil and natu:...
gas probably be exhausted?"

"That is impossible to calculate. We can approximate the amount of deposits of the coal beds very closely, but with oil and gas it is different, as there is no way to tell how much a well will yield. We have only to wait, and we have no verying of the exhaustion of a supply warning of the exhaustion of a supply in advance. The pressure forcing out the gas or oil is exactly the same throughout the time it is being in the Rockies plausible?"

"Is the report of the discovery of oil

"It is not at all unlikely, as oil has already been found in that region at very near the altitude of 4.500 feet, which is the figure given in describing the loca-tion of the flud. But it is rather more tion of the find. But it is rather more likely to be met in a rolling country. The formation of these deposits is very interesting, as you know the rocky stratas of the earth on plains run quite leveler only undulating; while in mountainous regions they are often found very much broken up, sometimes the rocks standing on end or heaved up in a broken mass. Now, the condition that broken mass. Now, the coudition that best invites the gas and oil deposits is very readily understood. Where the rocky's strata is unduling it forms great domes, which act as reservoirs for gas, which accumulates there as well as oil. The former, naturally the lighter, is first found, and then often when that is exhausted the oil below sponts up and below that heaviest of three articles comes salt water, so that when an oil well gives up briny fluid it is safe to say its wealth hus been practically exhausted, though in some instances there is a secflow for a limited period.

posits are exhausted?" "My opinion is that that emergency will be met by extracting the bituminous matter contained in rocks, and which is found all over the country. It would astonish those who have not given the subject thought to learn the terrible amount of this matter there is. The earth would yield many hundred thousand barrals per square mile, and it thousand barrels per square mile, and it is not extravugent to say this amount would sum up to a million barrels per square mile for the United States. At present only a very small portion of it can be extracted chemically, and I must confess that I don't see how it can be extracted on a commercial basis. But it could in some way be done when the demand would warraut it. This, with gas and petroleum, will be the great fuel of the future, and probably eventually the forumer alone will be the article of consumption."

What will be done when these de-

Where will we get our oil in the future?"

That is difficult to answer, but the most promising purt of the United States, I should say, is found on the western slope of the Appalachian mountains, running from southern Penusylvania, through West Virginia, eastern Kentucky, eastern Tonnessee, into southern Alabama. This is a very broad belt, and I think in the future it will yield enormous quantities of petroleum. There are other isolated belts west of the Missouri river, in the Rocky monntains, which promise very well, though they are much smaller in territory cov-

Whereabouts of Cabinet Officers.

Washington, July 29. - Only two members of the cabinet are now in the city-Secretaries Noble and Rusk. Secretary Blaine is at Bar Harbor. Attor-uey General Miller, at Deer Park, was joined by Secretary Windom Saturday night, and the secretary of war is at his home in Vermont. Secretary Tracy paid a visit to the navy department Sat-urday afternoon, and Postmaster Gen-eral Wanamaker has been in Philadelphia for several days. Secretary Rusk, when he becomes bored with office seekers, hurries to the interior department for relief, and Secretary Noble returns the compliment the first opportunity that presents itself. Secretary Noble will probably leave Washington early in the week for a vacation of several days.

SUNDAY IN CINCINNATI.

A Large Number of Arrests, But no Serious Rlot Occurs.

CINCINNATI, July 29. - Yesterday passed off without the expected riot over the enforcement of the saloon closing law. Chief Dietsch took the precaution of calling out all available members of the force, the ordinary watch being doubled all day and up to midnight. At every station a large force was kept in reserve, an especially large number be-ing kept at the Bremen street station in readiness in event of an outbreak over

The second relief men, who generally go on duty at 3 p. in., were pressed into service at 7 in the morning, and at 2 p. m. the night squad came ou watch, making a total of 400 men on duty during the afternoon and evening.

. The saloous were not generally open. Eichler did not open. That is, front doors were not swinging wide, and erowds did not surge in and ont of them. This state of affairs was not expected from the prospects of the early morning. Then many saloon keepers threw open their places and allowed all to come in.

But prompt action on the part of the police changed all this. Saloon keepers were arrested as soon as their places were found open. Often their wives took their places. But their wives were also arrested.

Sometimes there was a hitch in the securing of bonds, and the saloon keeper had to occupy a cell for a few hours. All this was decidedly discouraging, and the arrests became fewer and fewer as the day progressed.
